Shocking images show the TWO-MILE long vehicle encampment - made up of people living in RVs, trucks and trailers - along Highway 101 north of San Francisco as Biden voters are pushed out of the housing market

- The average household income in the county is $131,000, with 78 percent of homeless locals living in the area before being forced to the encampment
- Pictured taken by DailyMail.com show families living in tents and using portable barbeques as their belongings spill out of the RV's
- The state has been handed more than $3million to try to help those living in the vehicles find homes
- Marin County recently reduced the FOOD STAMPS for users and cut off users SSA money

By EMMA JAMES

Hundreds of locals in one of San Francisco's wealthiest counties have been forced to pack up their lives into RVs and trailers after being pushed out of the housing market.

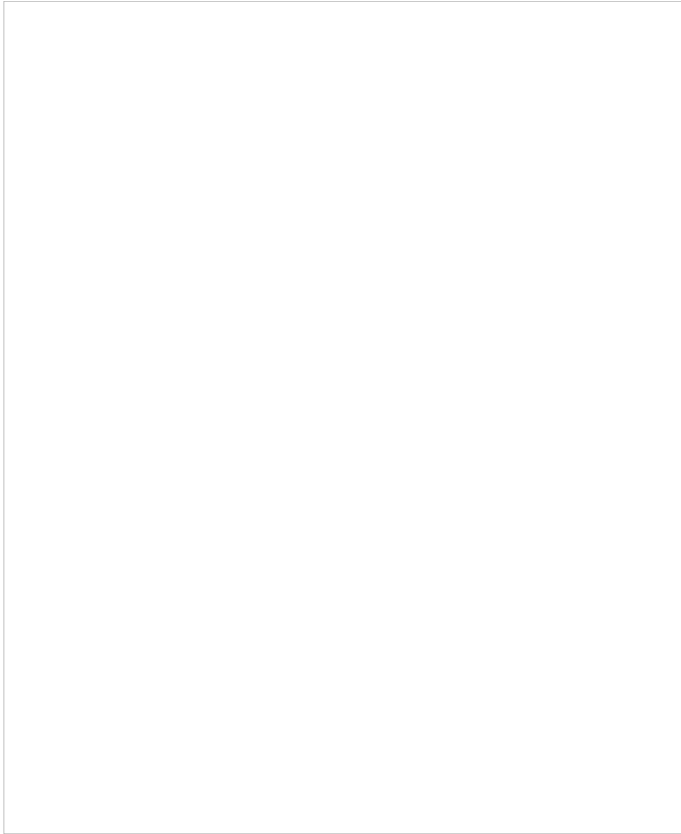

Shocking photos show the ever-growing line of trucks and other vehicles along 101 Highway – which now stretches over two miles in one of the largest encampments in the country.

Cities in Marin County, where on average homes cost $1.4million, are pushing for the line along the highway to end after the number of residents living in their cars ballooned during the pandemic.

Photos and video taken by DailyMail.com show families living in tents and using portable barbeques as their belongings spill out of the RV's and trucks.

Some appear to have used flags to mark the area of road that they use for their home, with many pulling tarpaulin over their cars to protect their possessions.

Officials say that there are at least 135 vehicles along Binford Road, on the outskirts of Novato, as the number who call it home has expanded.

The average household income in the county is $131,000 – which has left those with lower incomes nowhere to turn.

Residents of the surrounding area are now coming together to try to help bring the encampment to an end by helping people find services they need.

Every month they are given free groceries, assistance with their housing case management, medical assistance and much more.

There will be a push for the services to be expanded after state funding was awarded to Novato, Sausalito and San Rafael and to Marin County for unincorporated areas like Binford Road.

Each city, and Marin County, received $500,000 to address their encampment issues – with the county bringing in $1million in resources to help each of the regions.

Low-income residents in Marin County say that they have been left with nowhere to go as a cost-of-living crisis grips the region.

Gary Naja-Riese, director of homelessness for Marin County said that their 'first and immediate priority is Binford'.

The county estimates that there are around 80 residents permanently staying in Binford, with others abandoning their vehicles at the side of the road.

Local organizations are on hand to help with social and medical issues, with the encampment mostly struggling with hypertension, diabetes and mental health issues.

But some are well enough to work full time – though none are able to afford a place to live in the county with skyrocketing costs.

Other cities in California enforced an RV ban in 2016, with many coming to blows when residents refused to move.

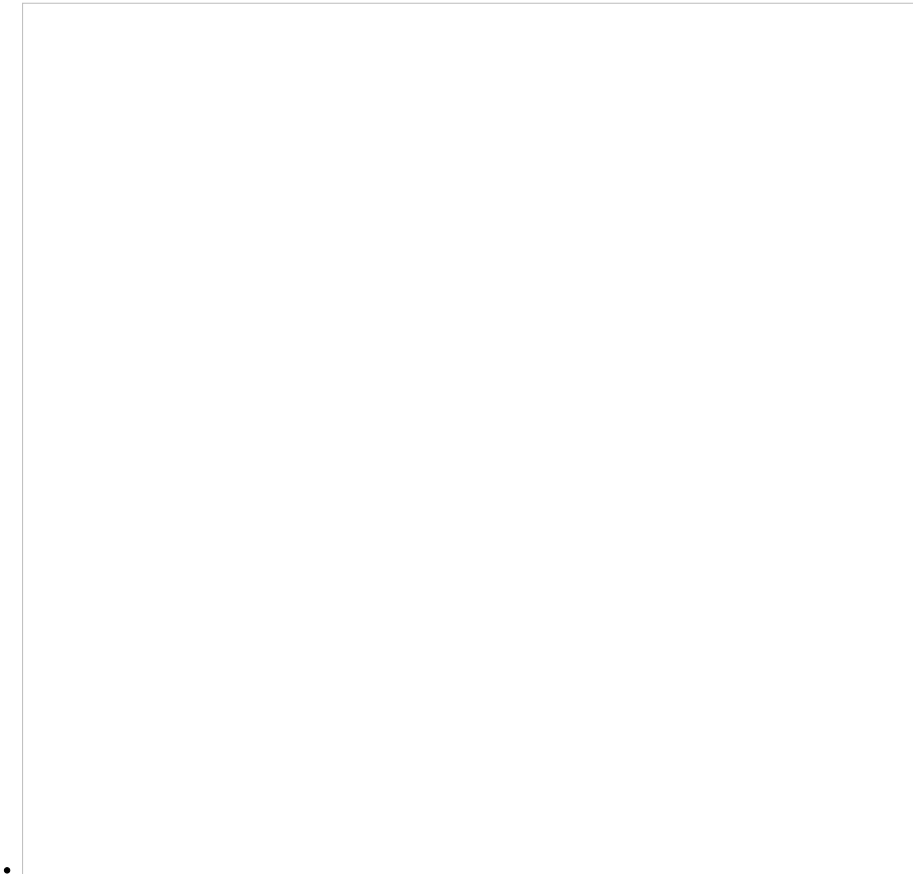

Officials have speculated that because Binford Road's encampment gets support, it has a reputation as one of the last remaining areas where people sleeping in their cars won't get hassled by law enforcement.

Zoe Neil, director of Marin County's Downtown Streets Division told the San Francisco Chronicle: 'Historically, in Marin, it has been tough to sleep safely in vehicles or campsites outside.

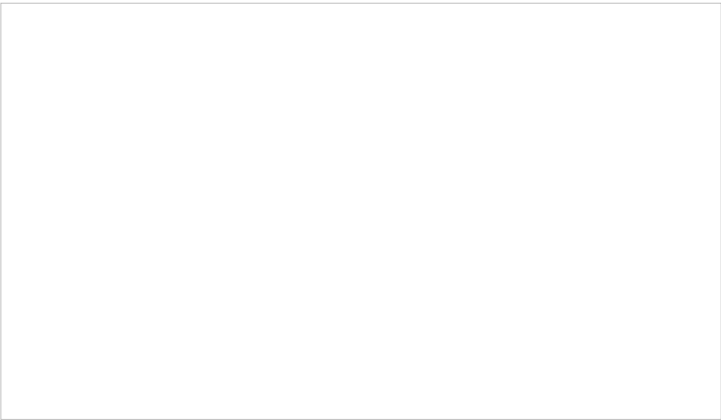

'Binford is one of the only places that folks can go. But it's not like it's a safe haven.'

However some officials have pushed for an overnight parking ban, which has not been put into place.

The county is also seeking an additional $1.5 million in state funding that would allow it to hire two more outreach staffers and a housing-based case manager who would work full-time at Binford.

On average, the county house an average of a dozen people a month across Marin County, primarily through landlord partnership programs at Marin Housing Authority.

Around 78 percent of people who are homeless in the area had residences in Marin County before becoming unhoused.

FEMA or someone should help them relocate to a State that has housing that they can afford. I see all of the campers and RVs, which are not inexpensive. Get the Hell out of Commieformia.

A LOT of these people spend their last pennies on drugs and that is why they live like this. It is called living off the fat of the land. There may be a few people truly in need but in my experience most of them are cranksters and fentanyl addicts.

Gavin Newsom wants to be President. When he ran for Mayor of San Francisco, he pledged to solve the homeless problem. When he ran for Governor of California, he pledged to solve the homeless problem. California now has the largest homeless population in the US. As President, Newsom will eclipse Biden in keeping our southern border open. Every state will look like California once Newsom is President.

If they're just working in fast food places, big box stores and the like what's keeping them there? Why not move to a more affordable state/area than San Francisco? Well I kept reading after asking and the answer seems to be that most of them aren't working at all and they're being given free groceries, medical assistance and more, in other words they're b u m s !

I'd venture the vast majority of these people are working poor and decent, who've simply been priced out of the housing and rental market. Just what else are they supposed to do? Unlike places like SF, where the woke councilors tacitly encourage homelessness by handing cash, needles and crack pipes, the very least the government can do here is provide sanitation.

Best way to help them would be to lower taxes. Reduce tax and many regulations. Taxes are a large part of mortgages. They also Lee people from building apts and other rental properties. More housing available the cheaper the housing

It was exactly like this in the Great recession as well. These people are the future you.

If they're living in RVs, trucks and other converted vehicles, then they're not homeless. Many people choose the "RV life". Goodness knows enough of them have vlogs about their travels. A few may indeed not be able to afford housing, must for most it's a life choice.

And you forgot to mention Trump was also taking a huge piece of pie. He didn't collect a salary for a reason. He was using his position in the White House to broker deals, violate the emoluments clause, collect HUD funds and leave office with 3.2 billion dollars in his pocket with much of that ripping off taxpayers. How convenient to gloss over that.

We used to fly out to San Francisco a lot. We would take the 101 across the Golden Gate & then the 1. We have flight benefits so we would drive usually to Portland, OR. We'd stop in Newport, Oregon eat at Ocean Bleu @ Gino's and get the BEST OUT OF THIS WORLD POPCORN SHRIMP!!It is FRESH 100 feet from the restaurant in these big shrimp trawlers & it just looks like pink foam being pushed out of the top of the ship. I have had fresh seafood everywhere. This place is INSANE. However, last trip we took I saw a homeless man fall in Portland & hit his head & stop breathing. I am an RN & at the time my young son, mother & father were with me. I was also wearing a short dress. I started CPR, had my son dial 911 & put it on speaker. 2 homeless men thought I was trying to "ROLL" their friend. I had to convince them to let me save his life. Then they scared my son so bad by holding onto him that my dad nearly tackled them. The ambulance police showed up 30 sec later. Won't go back.

I spent from 1985-1994 homeless in LA, because drugs were more important than living under a roof. All my money went to a pi/mp, who then provided me with an endless supply of c/ra/c/k coc/aïne. I would bring him $40, he gave me $5 worth to smoke right there, and 5 minutes later, I'm back walking the boulevard, a cycle that went on and on and on. Unlike these 'new' homeless folks, I didn't blame anyone but myself for my choices. I didn't get clean until I went to jail and found out I was pregnant, then I changed my life. Most people I know didn't get clean until they were locked up, people NEED consequences to their actions and jail forces you to get clean long enough to look at your life and make changes. Being soft on these people does only hurts them...and the rest of society.

You can't find homes when they are out of the price range of 99% of the population. I'm expecting that NYC will eventually look like this when the migrants realize that they can't find affordable apartments, even with employment. There are people who sell beater RVs in the Seattle area just for this purpose and the bureaucracy has a hard time moving or towing these vehicles when they are classified as someone's "home."

This is the product of years of incompetent "leadership" by Democrats. Gavin Newsom initiated the decline of SF when he was mayor and now he has inflicted his incompetence on the entire state of California as governor. Just think - Gavin has aspirations of being president. Imagine the entire country looking like this. If you vote Democrat this is what you are voting for.

Has anyone seen the slums in many many other countries? This is how it starts. These political policies do not work! I live in Maryland, have great credit, but struggled to qualify for rent. Its out of control. Rent is too high everywhere. Rental properties should be in accordance with what peoples average pay in an area is. I looked in bad areas and rent was so high, it makes no sense. Can anyone explain?

It's because property taxes and insurance has gone up. Landlords are in the business to make money. When taxes and insurance goes up, they have to raise the rent. The cost of living is up for everybody. Rents aren't based on what people can afford, it's based on the cost of owning and running the apartments plus more so the landlords can make money.

I'm surprised because along highway 101 are some of the best county run RV parks that you can camp right on the beach- and they are highly sought after and patrolled constantly. W/O a reservation, you can't stay there. They cost about $35 a night. Very good deal really. So for this to go on is surprising. Very surprising.

And you forgot to mention Trump was also taking a huge piece of pie. He didn't collect a salary for a reason. How convenient to gloss over that.

We used to fly out to San Francisco a lot. We would take the 101 across the Golden Gate & then the 1. We have flight benefits so we would drive usually to Portland, OR. We'd stop in Newport, Oregon eat at Ocean Bleu @ Gino's and get the BEST OUT OF THIS WORLD POPCORN SHRIMP!!It is FRESH 100 feet from the restaurant in these big shrimp trawlers & it just looks like pink foam being pushed out of the top of the ship. I have had fresh seafood everywhere. This place is INSANE. However, last trip we took I saw a homeless man fall in Portland & hit his head & stop breathing. I am an RN & at the time my young son, mother & father were with me. I was also wearing a short dress. I started CPR, had my son dial 911 & put it on speaker. 2 homeless men thought I was trying to "ROLL" their friend. I had to convince them to let me save his life. Then they scared my son so bad by holding onto him that my dad nearly tackled them. The ambulance police showed up 30 sec later. Won't go back.

This is the product of years of incompetent "leadership" by Democrats. Gavin Newsom initiated the decline of SF when he was mayor and now he has inflicted his incompetence on the entire state of California as governor. Just think - Gavin has aspirations of being president. Imagine the entire country looking like this. If you vote Democrat this is what you are voting for.

Has anyone seen the slums in many many other countries? This is how it starts. These political policies do not work! I live in Maryland, have great credit, but struggled to qualify for rent. Its out of control. Rent is too high everywhere. Rental properties should be in accordance with what peoples average pay in an area is. I looked in bad areas and rent was so high, it makes no sense. Can anyone explain?

It's because property taxes and insurance has gone up. Landlords are in the business to make money. When taxes and insurance goes up, they have to raise the rent. The cost of living is up for everybody. Rents aren't based on what people can afford, it's based on the cost of owning and running the apartments plus more so the landlords can make money.

so your saying if you can't afford to live in a state like California where there is a higher cost of living you should move to Alabama where you will likely have less access to basic services like clean running water, quality schools an opportunity to get a good paying job? sure let's create a cast system in America. my job pays me exceptionally well and I own my home.. anyone who isn't in this situation is beneath me and should be treated that way

I'm surprised because along highway 101 are some of the best county run RV parks that you can camp right on the beach- and they are highly sought after and patrolled constantly. W/O a reservation, you can't stay there. They cost about $35 a night. Very good deal really. So for this to go on is surprising. Very surprising.
