

Who Is Doge? Has Become a Metaphysical Question

The acting head of the General Services Administration says it has no DOGE team. It merely lists at least a half-dozen DOGE affiliates on payroll and has a section of its building for DOGE use only.

On March 20, Stephen Ehikian, acting administrator of the General Services Administration, was asked a seemingly simple question during an all-hands meeting with staff: Who from the GSA worked for Elon Musk's so-called Department of Government Efficiency? To Ehikian, the answer was far from straightforward. "D-O-G-E?" he asked, according to a video obtained by WIRED and sources with firsthand knowledge of the meeting. "You're talking about DOGE?" Then he clarified: "There is no DOGE team inside of GSA.